I went out to repair a 6 foot 'Archdale' drill this morning and discovered the huge clock spring that keeps the spindle balanced was broken in half! What a struggle to get the broken spring out of it's housing! I've told the customer to contact a local springmaker to see if they can make a new one (luckily Rochdale is a centre for spring making in the U.. This model was manufactured for approx I require info on the gear and handle positions.. Anyone here have any intel on a british version Archdale radial-arm drill press this one was built between 1940 and 1950 and has 5ft travel on the arm.

And what does the handle on the topRH side of the head do?. I know it's a long shot but does anybody know if somebody out there is still doing 'Archdale' spare parts.
